- /a/ The Arizona State Office administers BLM public lands in California along the Colorado River; the Eastern States Office administers BLM public lands in the 31 States east of and bordering on the Mississippi River; the Montana State Office administers BLM public lands in North and South Dakota; the New Mexico State Office administers BLM public lands in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas; the Oregon State Office administers BLM public lands in Washington; and the Wyoming State Office administers BLM public lands in Nebraska.

- /b/ Entrance permits are issued for entry into some Visitor Centers and National Conservation Areas. The number of entrance permits issued was not available in the Recreation Management Information System (RMIS) for this report. The number recorded in this table is the number of areas where entrance fees were authorized. Several offices in Arizona, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, and Wyoming incorrectly recorded some special area recreation permits (non-commercial) and daily use permits revenues as entrance revenues in RMIS in 2000.

- /c/ Special recreation permits are issued for noncommercial use in certain “special areas,” including Long-Term Visitor Areas, wilderness, river use, and backcountry hiking or camping.

- /d/ Daily use permits are issued for recreational use of facilities or services provided by the Federal government, such as campgrounds, day use areas, or boat ramps.

- /e/ Commercial special recreation permits are issued to outfitters, guides, vendors, and commercial competitive event organizers that provide recreational opportunities or services without permanent facilities and for less than 5 years. Special recreation permits for competitive and organized group events are also included in this category. The total number of permits in this category includes the number of new permits issued during Fiscal Year 2000, but does not include active multi-year permits issued in previous years. However, paid in Fiscal Year 2000 for previously issued multi-year permits are included in this category.

- /f/ Recreation concession leases are issued to entities conducting business on public lands to provide recreational opportunities or services associated with permanent facilities. This category also includes remaining recreation resident leases in the Colorado River Corridor in Arizona and California. The revenues reported in this table consist only of the fees that are directed to recreation deposit accounts; they do not include land use fees, which are accounted for in Table 3-5 (Non-Specific Land Use Authorizations).

ADMINISTERED BY THE BLM, FISCAL YEAR 2000 – concluded

- /g/ Golden Passports (Eagle, Age, and Access) are issued to provide discounts for same entrance fees and daily use fees at Federal facilities.
- /h/ The total revenue includes the amount recorded in the Recreation Management System as received by the BLM for recreational use of public lands, and subsequently deposited. Recreation fees are collected under a variety of authorities, including the Land & Water Conservation Fund Act, Recreation Fee Demonstration Program Authority, Cost Recovery, Oregon and California Lands, and other contributions received from permittees or leasees. Official accounting for permit, lease, and passport revenues received is found in BLM's Financial Management System.
